The Peanut Butter and Jelly Survey

Directions: The Peanut Butter and Jelly Survey is as informal and simple as a peanut butter and jelly sandwich. It is a fun way for a group of young children to explore individual differences. In this case, the differences are related to personal preferences regarding how to make a perfect peanut butter and jelly sandwich.

Pre-readers will need adult assistance to complete the survey. The group compares completed surveys. A simple bar chart may be made to graph the results. And of course, the author of this survey recommends that the group make peanut butter and jelly sandwiches – each child making a sandwich exactly to his or her liking. The group may also write a short Story describing their experience, taking a copy of the Story home with a survey for each member of the family to complete.
